Human hormonal balance depends on factors as nutrition, behaviour, culture, instinct, endocrinology, timing, economics, way of life, and emotions.

Both women and men have hormonal cycles which function determine there health's conditions.

Hormonal deficiency can affect many functions of the body. Some examples are: osteoporosis, pain in bones, fractures, spine compression, migraines, joint articulation and inflammation, diabetes, fever and reaction to toxins, immune system disorders, skin problems including eczema, psoriasis, vitiligo or excessive pigmentation spots (melanoderma), digestive problems (including colitis), allergies and asthma, intolerance to medication and rheuma.

Hormonal deficiency is the cause of many syndromes too, as Addison's disease and increased in Conn syndrome.

The Hormonal system has a primary influence in pregnancy and infertility.

Dysfunctions of each of the hormonal glands can cause infertility in both women and men.

Fertility problems are becoming more and more common every day around the world, and it is a very delicate and serious issue. It can lead to many problems during treatment, and lots of women have passed through programs on fertility that has caused even more hormonal disorder. It also involves many emotions.

To succeed with the fertility treatment more experience is needed.

The hormonal system is the most essential function in our whole body!
