The Hormonal & Infertility course offers professional advice and new follow up. Human hormonal balance depends on factors as nutrition, behavior, culture, instinct, endocrinology, timing, economics, way of life, and emotions. Both women and men have hormonal cycles which function determine their health conditions. Hormonal deficiency can affect many functions of the body. Some examples are: osteoporosis, pain in bones, fractures, spine compression, migraines, joint articulation and inflammation, diabetes, fever and reaction to toxins, immune system disorders, skin problems including eczema, psoriasis, vitiligo or excessive pigmentation spots (melanoderma), digestive problems (including colitis), allergies and asthma, intolerance to medication and rheuma. Hormonal deficiency is the cause of many syndromes too, such as Addison's disease and Conn syndrome. The Hormonal system has a primary influence in pregnancy and infertility. Dysfunctions of each of the hormonal glands can cause infertility in both women and men. Fertility problems are becoming more and more common every day around the world, and it is a very delicate and serious issue. It can lead to many problems during treatment, and lots of women have passed through fertility programs that have caused even more hormonal disorders. It also involves many emotions. To succeed with the fertility treatment more experience is needed.

The hormonal system is the most essential function in our whole body!

Praxis Vertebralis Module I

Praxis Vertebralis makes use of neurological maps that were not available in the past. This is thanks to image medicine like Positron Emission Tomography (PET).

The Central Nervous System (C.N.S.) is key to reflexology because it regulates the entire body. There can be no reflexological response if there is no C.N.S.

The practitioner is trained to observe the disease in both the spinal cord and the spinal cord area of the foot. With further exploration the session can then be performed on the feet. Facial nerve points

Covered in Module I

- Posturology, observations of the body posture
- The influence of the postural problems in organic, physical and emotional function
- The central nervous system
- Correction of postural problems through the feet
- The map of neurological zones and points of the foot, corresponding to the spine and spine nerves
